Helene Pizzi, Italian garden writer, recommends eating roses. "Roses are herbs", she says. "Now that roses can be grown without chemicals, it's time to bring roses back to the kitchen". Pizzi, who has lived in Rome for over 40 years, writes for Italy's important garden magazine 'Giardini'. Pizzi is an International Rose Judge, Senior Advisor for the Royal National Rose Society for Rome and European editor for the Rosarian's Network. She spoke at the Horticulture Media Australia Symposium 2002.

William Radler, international rose hybridizer, is world famous for developing the award winning Knock Out series, winner of All America Selections in 2000 and 2007. Knock Out has been selected as one of two official roses at the 2008 Olympics in Beijing, China. In 2008, the Huntington Botanical Gardens and New York Botanical Garden will recognize Radler as Great Rosarian of the World.
